

Grape Vine of SETX

HERALD HOME CONTACT

- RT @AdrBell: We will not stop until common sense gun laws are enacted in America...
- Wildlife officials save deer with a glass bowl stuck on its head ...
- RT @AdrBell: We will not stop until common sense gun laws are enacted in America...
- It's white roses, peonies and foxgloves for Harry-Meghan royal wedding ...
- Voluntary Evac Orders for Newton County ...
- Beaumont Police arrest suspect wanted for robbing victims at gunpoint in Facebook...

FOOD & DRINKS

Tourists pick their own grapes at Chile wine harvest fest

1 week ago 1 Min Read

Topics

- 5 Celebrities
- 353 Entertainment
- 7 Fashion
- 365 Featured
- 70 Food & Drinks
- 701 local
- 43 Movies
- 5 Music
- 144 Narrative Engineers
- 255 Sports
- 7 Technology
- 7 Travel
- 75 Uncategorized

Featured

- FOOD & DRINKS
72-year-old's lawsuit claims she found mouse remains in soup
- FOOD & DRINKS
A chicken in every backyard: Urban poultry needs more regulation to protect human and animal health

flambeaux

Add Comment

VALLE DE COLCHAGUA, Chile (AP) — Dozens of tourists armed with sharp scissors and donning dusty gloves and aprons walk through rows of green vines, hand-picking dark purple grapes that will be turned into Chilean wines enjoyed around the world.

It's hard work under a scorching sun and the professional pickers watching them from a distance grin knowingly. But the tourists have paid for the hands-on experience at Chile's harvest, which draws thousands of visitors each year, so they carefully cut the precious grapes in bunches and deposit them into wooden crates at the Viu Manent winery.

"The truth is that you always drink the wine, but you don't really know the process behind it," said Gina Cuesta, a visitor from Colombia.